

#ISO70years for the Cyprus Organisation for Standardisation (CYS)

Happy 70th Birthday ISO!

What better way to celebrate, than educating young people and high school students on standardisation?

On the 15th March, choosing the World Consumers Day, two CYS officers delivered a series of lectures to more than 120 high school students and teachers.

All participants were able to learn about standards, how they are prepared and their importance in everyone's life, no matter how old they are, what they do, or where they live. The lectures were delivered using very interactive methodologies using a lot of pictures, animations, videos, and many examples that the students were able to identify from their daily routine. Indeed, they were able to understand and appreciate what standards currently do for them, but also realized the importance of standardization in their future as professionals and as parents!
